Many dedications have been so verbose in their struggle to express the importance of an idea. But often the most direct means to illustrate that idea have been ignored. To be brief. . .

Do you know that weary feeling when your mind is strangely strangled, and your head is like a ball of wool that's very, very tangled;
and the tempo of your thinking must be lenient and mild as though you were explaining to a very little child?

"The authority of government, even such as I am willing to submit to, for I will cheerfully obey those who know and can do better than I, and in many things even those who neither know nor can do so well, is still an impure one: to be strictly just, it must have the sanction and consent of the governed. SPERRY RAND

the decade ahead

. . . will be one of realizing the potential which lies in our roots . . . a period of dramatic change for the entire globe.

Your school years have equipped you with facts, thoughts, questions . . . and some of the answers. Your search for more answers begins now. It is a search that will never end, for the world, with its expanding horizons, is growing further from the simple answer. The excitement and knowledge gained from the search are valuable and will lead to greater, deeper thoughts and understandings.

Know, too, that this search will inevitably lead to the answers of tomorrow . . . answers different from those of today. For tomorrow's world will be a changed world.

You, the graduating class, can claim possession of the roots of knowledge. It is these roots that will direct the rate and course of tomorrow's growth toward a better world.
